

The types of housing that work best for us change throughout our lives, and Milwaukee needs more housing for its current population. Yet, in many Milwaukee neighborhoods, the rules for building housing limit certain types. The City of Milwaukee is updating policies and regulations for housing development to encourage more housing types and choice across city neighborhoods.

Goals of the Housing Element:

- ▶ Increasing housing supply and the variety of housing types within the city of Milwaukee
- ▶ Supporting new housing that creates walkable urban neighborhoods
- ▶ Increasing transit options and access to jobs
- ▶ Providing more affordable, quality housing choices for all Milwaukeeans

What type of housing would you like to live in now? In 10 years? 20 years?

Housing comes in many diverse types!

What is the Housing Element?

The Housing Element is the result of a citywide planning initiative to support Milwaukee’s evolving housing needs.

- ▶ Sets a collective vision for housing in Milwaukee through an update to the City’s Comprehensive Plan.
- ▶ Includes policies and recommendations for housing & neighborhoods, including recommendations for updates to Milwaukee’s Zoning Code.

How does this Plan impact me & my neighborhood?

Limiting the types of housing within neighborhoods impacts affordability, walkability, climate change, the ability to age in place and keep communities together, access to resources, and more.

There are two main strategies to encourage additional types of housing in more neighborhoods. Based on data from similar cities and building costs, change is expected to occur slowly over time.

Wait, what is a Zoning Code?

Zoning is the set of rules made by local governments to control how land is used and developed. Each community has its own zoning code. The City of Milwaukee’s Zoning Code includes a zoning map and written rules (the zoning text). Every property in Milwaukee is assigned a zoning classification. Zoning rules decide things like what can be built on a property, how tall buildings can be, and where buildings can be put on the land.

In the city of Milwaukee, the neighborhoods with the most types of housing were developed before the City adopted its first zoning code in 1922. The changes recommended by the Housing Element will allow for more housing types to be developed in more neighborhoods.

7 Key Priorities

Increased Housing Choice & Access

Increasing variety of housing types and supply will help create a better city for all Milwaukeeans.

Repairing Homes & Neighborhoods

Repair can significantly enhance the quality and stability of neighborhoods.

City Commitment to Intergovernmental Collaboration & Legislative Advocacy

To help increase funding for affordable housing, support homeownership programs, increase accountability for landlords, and to enact legislation to protect tenant’s rights.

City Commitment to Homeownership

Supporting households achieve homeownership, helping existing homeowners repair their homes, building new affordable homes, and deploying innovative homeownership strategies for a variety of housing types.

City Commitment to Anti-Displacement

Ongoing tracking and programs to help households buy and retain homes, advocating for legislative measures to provide additional resources, and collaborating with community partners.

Economic Resilience

New tax base from new development will spread the costs of City services across a larger group of taxpayers, helping stem future property tax increases or service cuts.

Walkable Neighborhoods

More housing development near commercial districts and transit corridors creates vibrant walkable environments – increasing quality of life for all.

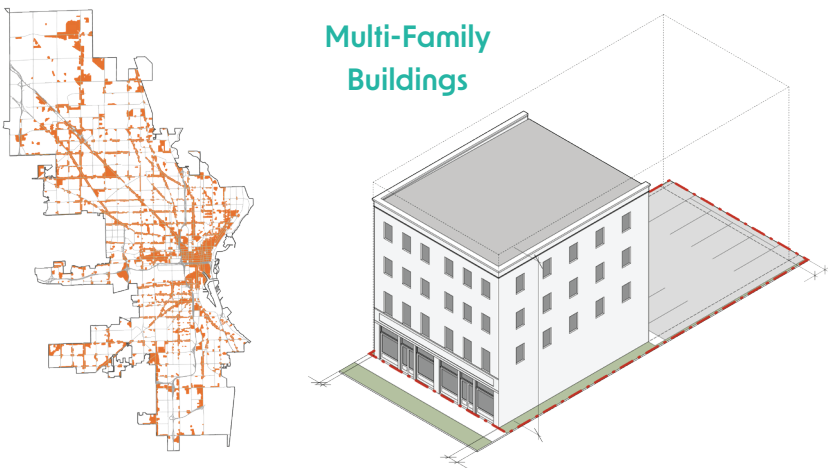

Near-term Strategy 1: Update the Zoning Code to allow more types of neighborhood-scale housing in more neighborhoods.

In all residentially zoned areas, allow:

Near-term Strategy 2:

Adjust the Zoning Code to remove barriers to new housing on business corridors & in multi-family zoning districts. Rely on height limits, setback requirements, & design standards instead of mathematical equations to control the number of housing units.

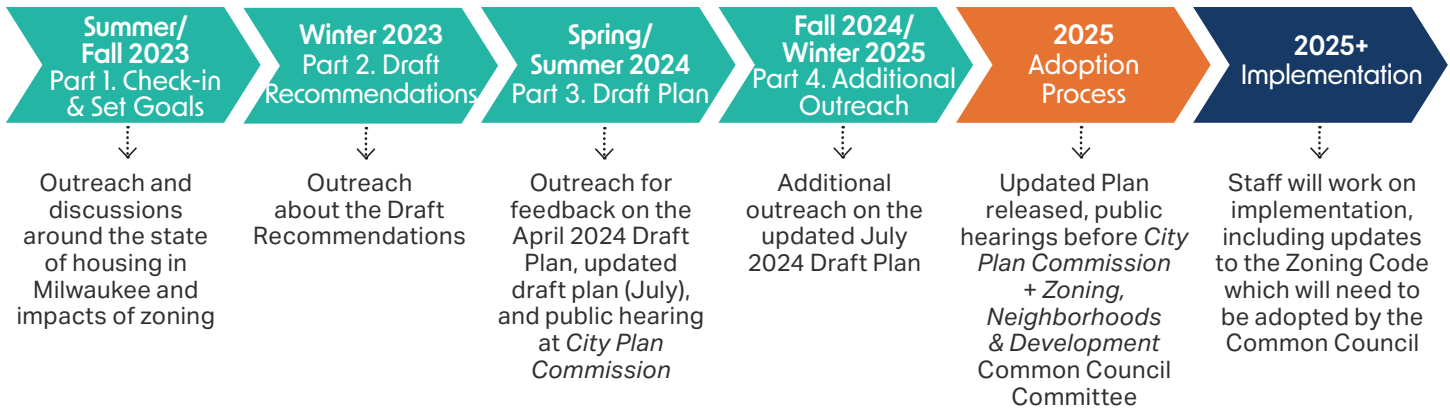

Applies to zoning districts that already allow larger multi-family buildings
